Chapter 3 Reading Task

How does the writer show Gretel's fear and uncertainty?

Gretel was still a few feet away and desperately wanted to look for herself, but something about the way he had said it and something about the way he was watching made her feel suddenly nervous. Bruno had never been able to trick her before about anything and she was fairly sure that he wasn't tricking her now, but there was something about the way he stood that made her feel as if she wasn't sure she wanted to see those children at all. She swallowed nervously and said a silent prayer that they would indeed be returning to Berlin in the foreseeable future and not in a month as Bruno suggested.

Bruno's new house	Outside the window
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• There was a garden directly beneath Bruno's window.• Full of flowers which grew in neat orderly sections in soil.• Like putting a tiny candle of light in the corner of a huge castle on a misty moor on a dark winter's night.• Past the flowers there was a very pleasant pavement with a wooden bench.• Gretel could imagine sitting in the sunshine and reading a book.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• There was a huge wire fence that ran along the length of the house.• The fence was very high, higher even than the house they were standing in.• At the top of the fence enormous bales of barbed wire were tangled in spirals.• There was no greenery anywhere to be seen.• The ground was made of a sand-like substance.

What are your impressions of each setting? Look carefully at the words that are highlighted and think about their effects.

Everywhere they looked they could see people, tall, short, old, young, all moving around. Some stood perfectly still in groups, their hands by their sides, trying to keep their heads up, as a soldier marched in front of them, his mouth opening and closing quickly as if he were shouting something at them. Some were formed into a sort of chain gang and pushing wheelbarrows from one side of the camp to the other, appearing from a place out of sight and taking their wheelbarrows further along behind a hut, where they disappeared again. A few stood near the huts in quiet groups, staring at the ground as if it was the sort of game where they didn't want to be spotted. Others were on crutches and many had bandages around their heads. Some carried spades and were being led by groups of soldiers to a place where they could no longer be seen.

Chapter 5 Reading Task

How is Bruno's father presented in the following extracts?

Appearance

Down below he saw the door open to Father's office standing open and a group of five men outside it, laughing and shaking hands. Father was at the centre of them and looked very smart in his freshly pressed uniform. His thick dark hair has obviously been recently lacquered and combed, and as Bruno watched from above he felt both scared and in awe of him. He didn't like the look of the other men quite as much. They certainly weren't as handsome as Father. Nor were their uniforms as freshly pressed. Nor were their voices so booming or their boots so polished.

Power

Father held a hand up in the air, which immediately caused the other men to fall silent. It was as if he was the conductor or a barbershop quartet.

'Gentlemen,' he said, and this time Bruno could make out every word because there had never been a man born who was more capable of being heard from one side of a room to the other than Father. Your suggestions and your encouragement are very much appreciated. And the past is the past. Here we have a fresh beginning, but let that start tomorrow. For now, I'd better help my family settle in or there will be as much trouble for me in here as there is for them out there, you understand?'

Things to think about

- Think about how he presents himself and what this suggests
- Look closely at Bruno's father's choice of language
- Think about how he talks to the other men
